Comfort stations planned

By ED LEROY
Hancock County Superior Court has agreed to loan money to local business firms to help them build comfort stations for federal workers.

The board recently appointed to fund and oversee the project. Pullman said the start-up money will allow the District to hire an engineer and begin survey work needed to assess many applications that will be submitted for funding.

The money to build the stations will be taken out of the federal funds that the District will receive from the federal government.

Supers recommend public defender; motel tax extension

BY ED KOPOMA
Hancock County supervisors had a full plate before them Monday when they convened their February meeting.

Among items they acted on were:
• A recommendation by assessor Circuit Court Judge Rosta Mahos to hire Todd Thrimley, a Bay native and graduate of St. Andrews, as a public defender to replace Harry Ward, who resigned.

• Passed a resolution asking the county's legislative delegation to get approval in the current session to extend, for another one or two years the two percent tax on motels, hotels and bed and breakfast businesses that helps to fund the Hancock County Tourist Development Bureau. The tax was scheduled to expire July 1.

• Directed Jeff Rouse of the Gulf Regional Planning Commission to apply for another grant from the Department of Environmental Quality that would fund waste tire collection in Bay St. Louis and Clarksburg.

• Approved the latest design changes for the Juvenile Detention Center and heard the architect report that the specifications would be ready to put the project out to public bid by the Board's March 2 meeting date.

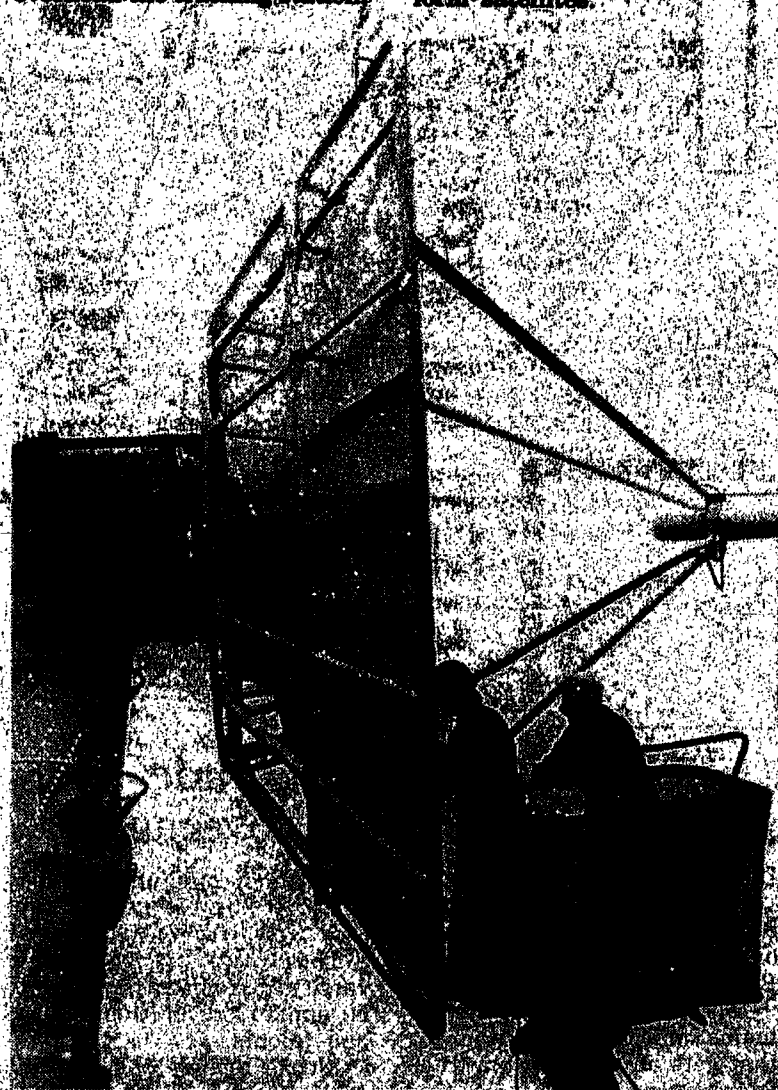

• Heard a report from county inventory clerk Richard Pate that work crews are about half way through replacing ceiling tiles and making other repairs at the Civic Center on Longfellow Drive.

• Heard a plea from longtime Clarksburg Harbor resident, Ina Day to put in street lighting, reclaim the sand beach, and make other improvements needed in the area.

• Heard a report from School District Attorney Steve Rogers.

Green colors our thoughts

While it is totally expected that green colors virtually every move of the media, politics, of entertainment, of sports and most professions, it is not that it colors so strong in the everyday life of our school systems.

Revelle was right on when he said, "There's no white power. There's no black power. There's only green power."

Green means, in religion, too, some will ask. Come a bit in religion. Perhaps as much in religion as elsewhere, green color the talk of stewardship, of tithing, of fund raising and yes, of taxation. Green color church benefits, harkens gospel musicals and programs.

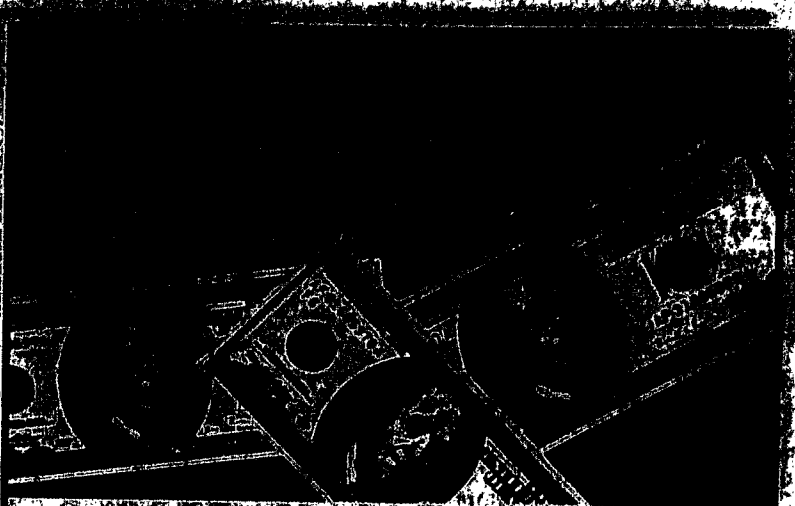

Even in clerical circles, where one is supposedly working first, last and always for God and God's kingdom, one hears ministers describe a particular church as a "plum" and therefore desirable above certain other rather poor churches.

Green tints well-to-do churches with the aura of success, prestige and attraction for the tired, depressed, embattled masses. Little if any reflection is given to the fact that Jesus counseled us to sell what we have and give it to the poor.

What, then, would Jesus advise churches (religious gatherings) whose accent is not an sharing with and elevating the poor, but in emulating the resources and power of the rich?

While green means "Go" in traffic and practically everything else, it should make us stop and reconsider in matters negotiable, political, social and religious, for "Where your treasure is, there your heart will also be" (Mt. 6:21).

Meeting for parents set

Parents of students riding the Laidlaw Bus No. 27, Waveland area, are urged to attend a public meeting on Tuesday at the Mount Chapel Baptist Church, Healthy St., Waveland. Clarence Harris, concerned resident, reported.

The meeting will be at 7 p.m. and will include representatives from the Laidlaw Bus Company.

Bus drivers have been reporting disturbances by students on the bus and it is necessary to have this problem addressed, Harris said.

The bottom half shows a table with multiple columns and rows of text, which is also extremely dark and difficult to read. The overall quality is very poor, likely due to a low-quality photocopy or scan.

USMCC to offer risk

The University of Southern Mississippi Gulf Coast will offer a two-day management seminar on occupational stress and ergonomics from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday and Tuesday, May 14 and 15.

The seminar will teach participants how to empower themselves and co-workers to higher levels of responsibility and productivity. The goal of the seminar is to compensate employees for the stress and strain of their jobs and to improve their productivity.

Topics to be covered include: stress and its effects on the body; stress and the risk of injury; stress and the workplace; stress awareness; the recognition of ergonomic hazards; and the impact of stress on the economy and the manufacturing industry.

Cost is $110 per person or $100 per person with three or more registrants from the same organization. The seminar is open to CEOs, managers, supervisors and other employees.

Dr. Knight, a certified ergonomist and the instructor, Knight has conducted safety consultations and accident investigations for corporations, government agencies and the military throughout the United States for 15 years.

The program can be tailored to meet your organization's needs at a convenient time and location.

For information or to register, call Dr. Knight at (228) 497-7777 or (228) 497-1252.

In order to keep the crying a student must be a role in the baby's life. The baby must be held for 30 minutes. The baby must be held by the student's arms with tamper-proof wristbands. The wristbands help guarantee the student alone cares for the baby.

"When the baby cries at night (the students) have to keep the tension on the probe, or the baby will cry longer," Lain explained. "The longer the baby goes between crying times, the longer the student has to tend it."

The crying events are random and loud, although Lain can set the baby's computer on different "speeds."

When set on "normal," the baby cries intermittently every 90-120 minutes. A "cranky" baby cries every 15-180 minutes and an "easy" baby every 180-360 minutes.

"It's like a real baby," Lain said. "They really don't know when it's going to wake up." "I've had (students) be in the shower and their mothers had to bring the baby to them," she said. "So I tell (students) they have to learn as soon as they tend to the baby to run to the shower because it's pretty certain the baby is going to sleep."

Learning what it would be like to cope with a baby is the idea behind the program, Lain said, with the major goal being to prevent teenage pregnancy. The hope is that when the kids see how hard it is to take care of a baby, they will think twice about having one.

Teenage pregnancy and teen mothers are more common today than in the past. "A lot of girls who are mothers will not admit how hard it is," Lain said. "All the (other) kids see is a cute baby all dressed up and they don't see what's involved."

The hope is that "Baby Think It Over" will make some reality in the kids.

So far, Lain said, the feedback has been encouraging.

All three students interviewed by the Echo resoundingly responded that their time with the baby taught them they didn't want to have a child any time soon.

A lot can be ascertained by how the students look. The day after having had the baby overnight, reported Lain.

Some of them come back looking really rough," she laughed. "They say 'Take this baby, I am sick of it.'"

Angel LaBauve was one of those students.

"I really wanted to get the baby," LaBauve said. "I was so excited to get it."

The excitement didn't last very long.

LaBauve said it first started to wane when she had to pull over on the side of the road to feed the baby. But, even that was nothing compared to the night still to come.

Sometime during the night, LaBauve was awakened by her mother telling her the baby, which was in LaBauve's own room, was crying.

"I'm not a light sleeper," LaBauve explained. "I told the baby, 'I don't know how long you've been crying.'"

Sometime between 2-3 a.m., LaBauve said she couldn't take it anymore and removed the computer from the baby's back.

How long the baby cries is measured by the computer in its back and with the results recorded by Lain for grading. A "neglect event" is registered if the baby cries for more than one minute without being tended.

For example, a mother's hands are thrown around the baby's head. Even when the baby is held by the computer, the baby must be laid on its back or right side to sleep, and cries if placed on its stomach.

The student knows an abuse event has registered because the baby has a 30-second crying episode which cannot be stopped with the probe.

Students have reported abuse events occurring for instance, when the baby is grabbed by a fellow student and tossed around.

Lain said, "I tell them 'You are responsible for that baby."

Zoning

tant, Alicia Griffith, at 467-4157 he can mail "The Zoning Zone" publication to you that pertains to your particular piece of property or you can stop by the office at 151 Main Street in Bay St. Louis and pick the literature up.

Neil explains the "R-3" zone is the last of the residential classifications of property, and these areas in the county are designated for medium to high-density population, but are allowed on smaller lots.

There are many things you can build on these lots without getting approval from anybody. These include: a house, a condominium, an apartment, a two-family dwelling, or a townhouse. You can also place a mobile home on the lot provided sewerage is available, and you can put two trailers on one lot, if you have more than five acres. You're also allowed to run a boarding house.

For certain other construction, you will have to go to the county Planning Commission to request a "conditional use."

This would be required if you want to build a church on the property; if you want to open a private school or operate a business out of your home; or establish a mobile home subdivision (more than two trailers).

As is the case throughout the county, there are certain minimums to the size of lots and the piece of property. Single-family homes require a lot that is at least a minimum of 6,000 square feet. A minimum of 10,000 square feet is required for a two-family dwelling. A minimum of 15,000 square feet is required for a three-family dwelling. A minimum of 20,000 square feet is required for a four-family dwelling. A minimum of 25,000 square feet is required for a five-family dwelling. A minimum of 30,000 square feet is required for a six-family dwelling. A minimum of 35,000 square feet is required for a seven-family dwelling. A minimum of 40,000 square feet is required for an eight-family dwelling. A minimum of 45,000 square feet is required for a nine-family dwelling. A minimum of 50,000 square feet is required for a ten-family dwelling.

Two students participated in this program as a condition of their probation. The students are the baby's "mom" and "dad." Darryl Williams and Deann Ladner had the baby from Friday afternoon until Sunday.

As may be expected, there was some discussion over who actually took care of the baby more, and who did what.

Buy and hold: winning strategy

They say you can't time the market, and they're right. But if you're looking for a long-term investment strategy, buying and holding may be the way to go. According to a recent study by the National Bureau of Economic Research, investors who held their stocks for more than 12 months earned significantly higher returns than those who traded frequently. The study found that the average annual return for investors who held their stocks for more than 12 months was 10.4 percent, compared to 7.1 percent for those who traded frequently. This suggests that a buy-and-hold strategy may be a more effective way to build wealth over the long term.

Tourism Bureau wins award

The St. Louis County Tourism Bureau has been awarded the 1999 National Tourism Award for its outstanding efforts in promoting tourism in the county. The award was presented to the bureau's executive director, John Carr, at a ceremony held in St. Louis. Carr praised the bureau's commitment to marketing the county's diverse attractions and its dedication to providing excellent customer service to visitors. The award recognizes the bureau's success in increasing tourism revenue and creating jobs in the local economy.

It is estimated that the information sent some 25,000 visitors into the county, increasing visitor counts significantly. Carr said the bureau's success was due to its innovative marketing strategies, including the use of the Internet and social media to reach a wider audience. He also credited the bureau's strong relationships with local businesses and organizations for its success in promoting tourism.

Attending the state tourism conference along with Carr were St. Louis County Tourism Bureau members, including St. Louis County Executive James S. Glick. Glick congratulated Carr and the bureau staff for their hard work and dedication to promoting tourism in the county. He said the award was a testament to the bureau's commitment to excellence in tourism marketing.

Local realtor goes digital

A local realtor has embraced the digital age by launching a website that provides potential buyers and sellers with a wealth of information about the local real estate market. The website, which is hosted on a secure server, offers a comprehensive overview of the local market, including current listings, market trends, and expert analysis. The realtor, who has been in the business for over 10 years, said the website was a natural extension of his commitment to providing excellent service to his clients. He said the website would help him reach a wider audience and provide more timely information to his clients.

The website also features a variety of tools and resources that can help buyers and sellers make informed decisions about their real estate transactions. These tools include a mortgage calculator, a property value estimator, and a neighborhood guide. The realtor said he was confident that the website would be a valuable resource for anyone looking to buy or sell a home in the area.

The realtor's website is a testament to his commitment to staying current in the real estate industry. He said he was proud to be one of the first realtors in the area to launch a website, and he was confident that it would continue to be a valuable resource for his clients for years to come.

Elizabeth, anniversary chairman Phyllis Moran presided over the heads table. Special guests Rose, 189 Commander and Mrs. Wayne Oliver, Department Commander, and Mrs. Ed Merriman of Grants.

Continental Bicentennial Committee

At a meeting Feb. 17, the Continental Bicentennial Committee of the Bay St. Louis Area elected officers: Dan Ellis, president; Thomas A. C. Smith, vice president; and Dayton Robinson, treasurer.

The committee is composed of representatives from various business and professional groups, schools and churches. It has proposed a full schedule of events for the year 1990 in celebration of the 200th anniversary of the French colonization of Mississippi. The committee will also plan a series of events throughout the year with occasional themes promoted at each celebration.

As another matter of business, the committee adopted its charter. The Secretary of State's organizational plan includes a series of educational and cultural programs, including the Bicentennial Cultural Heritage as it existed during the early years of the French, English, Spanish and American influences.

The committee also passed which includes the production and distribution of a monthly eight-page newsletter and the acquisition of a series of flags which flew over the Pass, including the Pass of the French, the Pass of the English, the Pass of the Spanish and the Pass of the Americans.

A special event is being planned to announce the committee's program and projects that have been developed by the committee. All interested parties who wish to participate or contribute are invited to call Dan Ellis at 452-3138 or the Bay St. Louis Chamber of Commerce at 452-2252.

20th Star Chapter DAR

Members, guests and friends of the Mississippi State Society Daughters of the American Revolution will gather for the DAR's annual state conference in Jackson, Friday through Saturday, Feb. 20-21, at the Ramada Collington.

Daughters of 20th Star Chapter DAR chosen as delegates are Shirley H. Davenport, Hattie G. Pridgen, Jenny W. Thomas, Virginia W. Kelly and Laura A. Crawford.

Alternates are Rebekah Ray (also a page), Patricia C. Turner, Mildred W. Gayer and Carol J. Lindley.

Special conference guests include Paul Ott and Creta Stewart. Ott is a nationally known wildlife conservationist and host of the radio and television show "Listen to the Eagle."

Stewart, of the Mississippi Band of Choctaw Indians, will speak at the American Indians' breakfast Saturday morning.

Juniors and prospective juniors will be honored at an ice cream social on Saturday afternoon. DAR Juniors are members who are under age 35. The National DAR Juniors chairman, Pegi Ivancevich of Texas and Susan Allen, National DAR Page Committee, will present a program about the special work of DAR Juniors.

One of the highlights of every state conference is the National Defense luncheon and awards presentation Saturday noon.

Guest speaker for this year will be Major General Albert N. Hopkins (ret.). A native of North Mississippi, Hopkins served as Assistant Adjutant General of the Mississippi Army National Guard and presently serves as Chief Judge of the Court of Military Appeals, Mississippi Military Department.

On Sunday morning the special speaker for the Chaplain breakfast will be Dr. Bill Causey, executive director of the Mississippi Baptist Convention. Dr. Causey was also the pastor of Parkway Baptist Church in Jackson for 26 years.

The Children of the American Revolution in Mississippi will present their CAR debutante on Presentation Evening. The outstanding chapter report will also be announced.

Special DAR guests include State Regents Mrs. William B. McNeely of Louisiana and Mrs. F. Bean of Georgia and Mrs. J. Holland Seely of Louisiana.

All Mississippi Daughters are encouraged to attend.

Marine Corps League

The Mississippi Coast Detachment of the Marine Corps League meets every second Tuesday of the month at 7 p.m. at the American Legion Post 139 on Green Meadow Road in Bay St. Louis.

Membership is open to U.S. Marines, active duty, Reserve, retired and former Marines. At present there are 61 members and looking forward to a roster of three digits.

The Corps is active in community affairs, including fund raisers such as the 1989 Green of Hancock County. On the burner at this time is the beginning of a pistol team and a golf match. The golf match will be open to the public.

Potential Marine Corps League members may be interested in the annual celebration of the Marine Corps Birthday—live band, traditional cake and ceremony and dancing afterwards.

For information, contact Commandant Dick Peters, 466-0867, Ed Michaelson, publicity chairman, at 466-2879 or Patrick La-Nasa, 255-8735.

Mardi Gras Mascarade Workout

St. Jude Children's Research Hospital announced that the Mardi Gras Health Club in Bay St. Louis will be conducting a "Mardi Gras Workout" to benefit St. Jude Children's Research Hospital on Feb. 16. Locally, Andrea Loiacano has volunteered to coordinate the program.

St. Jude Children's Research Hospital, located in Memphis, Tenn., was founded by the late entertainer, Danny Thomas. The institution opened its doors to the public in 1962 to combat catastrophic diseases in children.

St. Jude is non-sectarian, non-racial and has provided medical care to over 14,500 children from across the United States.

All costs of treatment beyond those reimbursed by insurance are covered by the hospital.

The funds raised in the "Mardi Gras Workout" will help to ensure that children with cancer and other life-threatening diseases have a chance to live.

For more information, contact Andrea Loiacano at 466-2879.
